

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A display system in which a video display is controlled via a pointing device. The pointing device is used to indicate motion in two different directions. The video controller will display a menu on the video display when the pointing device is used. Movement in a first direction selects menu items, while movement in a second direction selects an aspect of the selected menu item.